About Us

Stacey and Bryan Eisenberg bring heart and expertise to every moment at A Place At Home – North Austin. For Stacey, senior care isn't just a career, it's her life's work. She was practically raised in a nursing home, tagging along with her mom at just three years old, and by 13, she had her first job caring for seniors, veterans and adults with disabilities. With over 40 years of experience, Stacey's passion is evident in every role she's had, from running assisted living and memory care communities to organizing daily events for nearly 300 seniors as the "Director of Fun." U.S. News & World Report, AARP and Care.com have taken notice, but to Stacey, every senior is family, deserving of the utmost care and respect. Stacey is a Community Educator for the Alzheimer's Association, a volunteer board member of Adult Protective Services and serves on the Aging Services Council.

Bryan is a New York Times bestselling business author, an ambassador for the Round Rock Chamber of Commerce and host of the local podcast Rock Solid Round Rock Business Leaders.
